

BIBLE STORY

LUKE 18:15-16

Jesus tells the disciples to let the children come to Him.

SAY THIS

WHO LOVES YOU?
JESUS LOVES YOU.

DO THIS

MORNING TIME

When you go into your child's room this month, say, "Good morning! Who loves [child's name]? Yes! Mommy/Daddy loves [child's name], and so does JESUS! Jesus loves [child's name]!"

DRIVE TIME

As you drive, tell your child to look for big things. Each time he/she points out something big, say, "Jesus' love is bigger than a [name of object]!" Flip the roles so you name big things you see. Have your child say, "Jesus' love is bigger than a [name of object]."

CUDDLE TIME

Cuddle up with your child this month and pray, "Dear God, thank You for giving us Jesus. Thank You that Jesus' love for us is SO big it will never, ever, EVER go away. Please help [child's name] always remember that Jesus loves him/her. We love You, God. In Jesus' name, amen."

BATH TIME

Place your child in the bathtub as it is filling with water. Say, "Look! The water is getting deeper. It's touching your knees. It's getting deeper. It's touching your toes. It's getting deeper. It's touching your belly." As you bathe your child, say, "This water is deep, but Jesus' love is even deeper! His love is SO deep you can't touch the bottom of it! His love for you is THAT big!"

PARENTING THROUGH THE TERRIBLE TWOS

By Cheryl Jackson

Life can be challenging and unpredictable. And, if you're parenting a two-year-old, you're guaranteed this year will have plenty of both. That sweet baby who used to cuddle in your arms has not only learned how to walk, but now he can run away from you—and fast. That little angel whose smile used to light up your world can now smile at you as she drops your phone—into the bathtub.

Personally, I've seen enough to know the phrase "terrible twos" wasn't invented without reason. There are days in this phase when "terrible" may seem like the only word to characterize the state of your home, your schedule, and your patience. This is the phase when a toddler suddenly explodes with personality.

It's the moment they fall to the floor screaming because you cut their sandwich the wrong way. Or you bring them the milk they asked for, and they realize they really wanted juice. Or you tell them they aren't allowed to do that completely irrational thing they were just trying to do, and the world suddenly falls apart. Yes, you will have moments this year when you stare, wide-eyed, at the determined child in front of you and wonder, What am I supposed to do with this?

The answer, even though it may not seem true in the moment, is really what it has always been: Love. It's the thing every selfish, stubborn, crazy-headed toddler needs most.

When my grandson Amari was two, he told me he loved me for the first time. Each time he said it, he put his whole body into it. It was like he couldn't say it loud enough or strong enough. He just had to let me know that HE LOVED ME!

This year your toddler is becoming more independent. But that means when he shows you love and affection, he does it because he chooses to. When she tells you she loves you, she says it because she means it. And as the parent of a two-year-old, you'll discover you have more love inside you than you ever knew possible. It's a shouting-match kind of love that will see you through the tantrums. It's a love that may catch you off guard as you find yourself captivated by this adorable, growing, bundle of personality.
